

Please join the Office of Science & Technology (OST) at the Embassy of Austria in Washington, DC, for its 2nd “bridges - The OST’s Online Magazine on S&T Policy” lecture series event:

A Conversation with Norman Neureiter
“The Internationalization of Science - What’s in the Future for US Science and Science Policy?”

Monday, December 15, 2008
7:00 p.m. – 9:00 p.m.

Embassy of Austria
3524 International Court, NW
Washington, DC 20008

bridges columnist Norman P. Neureiter is the director of the AAAS Center for Science, Technology and Security Policy. Neureiter’s previous appointments include science advisor to both Secretaries of State Madeleine Albright and Colin Powell. From 1969 to 1973, he served as the international affairs assistant in President Richard Nixon’s Office of Science and Technology.

The conversation will be moderated by Warren E. Leary, a Washington, DC-based award-winning science writer for more than 35 years, and former science correspondent for The New York Times.

Audience participation in the conversation is strongly encouraged, as are questions submitted with the RSVP.

The discussion will be followed by a reception; please RSVP by Friday, December 12 at <http://ostina.org>

The bridges lecture series is free to the public.
